“ A Poem I (Rosemarie) wrote while John was in the hospital:

IT was such an exciting moment,
sitting together hand in hand
Many papers we had to sign

Then he was whisked away and I was

Waiting, watching the clock, listening to the ticking, waiting, watching, ticking,
Waiting in anticipation to see and kiss my baby's face, touch his arm and whisper in his ear "I love you all is fine"

Waiting, watching the clock, listening to the ticking, waiting, watching, ticking,
Waiting in anticipation to see and kiss my baby's face, touch his arm and whisper in his ear "I love you all is fine" but that wasn't the case

It broke my heart, seeing him this way, again:

Waiting, watching the clock, listening to the ticking, waiting, watching, ticking,
Waiting in anticipation to see, kiss my baby's face, touch his arm and whisper in his ear "I love you all is fine" in our place

But this wasn't the case
Home, he never came

“ John, thank you for all your welcome hugs, your BBQ's, our shared drinks and listening to all my crazy adventures, ideas, the laughs, and of course all the "What were you thinking" pep talks!!
I was so grateful to be able to share a few moments with you before I travelled on my new beginning.
I will certainly miss all the family gatherings with your mom, and Rosie's mom.
I will always remember you, Rest In Heaven John!
My deepest condolences to Rose, Jamesis, and all the family.
All my Love
Catherine xx

“ My dear husband of almost 12 years, I miss you so! You were my rock, my heart and soul, my love whom I'd waited for all my life, and my friend. The love we had for one another will never be forgotten. You knew me more than anyone else ever did! The strength you exuded always made me feel safe and secure!
Our talks about our family of combined 5 sons happiness , struggles, and achievements, and then if course the politics, sports discussions watching the birds at the feeder while drinking coffee will also be so missed. Im truly grateful for our unforgettable blessed time together as short as it was, Please rest in the peace and comfort of his loving arms, my baby always!
